

Our cookie policy - What they are and how we use them.

What is a cookie?

A cookie is a text file containing a small amount of data which is downloaded to your computer when you visit our website. The vast majority of websites use cookies. Cookies are useful because they help us recognise those computers and users that have been to our website before. They allow us to remember your settings and play an important role in helping us to enhance the usability and performance of our website and your experience using it. Some cookies are also essential to enable you to move around our website and use its features. They could also help us to identify which content is the most popular and the types of journey visitors have to our websites.

When you access our website you might receive a message advising you that we have placed some cookies on your computer. This was necessary in order to display the website page to you.

If you don't want us to place cookies on your computer then there are a number of ways you can opt out: setting your browser either to reject all cookies, to only allow trusted sites to set them, or to accept only those cookies from those websites which you are currently on. Please remember, if you do delete all your cookies, some features of our websites, such as remembering your login details, will not work and your experience on our websites may be affected.

The website www.aboutcookies.org which is run by the law firm Pinsent Masons, gives you detailed step by step guidance on how to control and delete cookies depending on your browser type. You can then adjust your browser settings to your preferred level of protection.

Cookies are essential to enable you to move around the website and use its features, such as accessing secure areas. Without these cookies, our website won't work properly.

Performance

These cookies collect information about how you use our websites, for instance, which pages you go to most often and if you get error messages from those pages. We only use these cookies to improve how our website works.

Functionality

These cookies allow us to remember the choices you make (such as your user name) and provide enhanced, more personal features.

Advertising or Tracking Cookies

We do not accept advertising from any other organisation on our website. We do however survive economically as the result of sponsorship which we acknowledge by displaying a small graphic on our website associated with the specific sponsor. These graphics often link to the sponsors own website where cookies may also be employed. If you visit any of our sponsors websites or follow any links to external websites not under the aegis of Littleham & Landcross Community Web Site Association and you are concerned about cookies then you should consult the individual website's cookie policy. We are not responsible for the way in which other websites use cookies.
